

Latin America Open Data Initiative

Fabrizio Scrollini
Executive Coordinator

About ILDA

ILDA was set up in 2010 as a research project by the International Development Research Centre and Avina Foundation to explore and understand the emerging impact of open data in Latin America.

ILDA catalyses action around open data in Latin America

Data for...

- Where is your closest hospital or clinic?
- What kind of services do they provide?
- How much does it cost to get medicines?
- Could you get a better service in other provider?

These are very basic questions that shape an important part of your life and depend on public data to be available so you can make these decisions.

What is Open Data? (open definition)

It can be summed up in the statement that:

“Open means anyone can freely access, use, modify, and share for any purpose (subject, at most, to requirements that preserve provenance and openness).”

Put most succinctly:

“Open data and content can be freely used, modified, and shared by anyone for any purpose”

Transparency

Information is the currency of democracy

Thomas Jefferson

In 2017, the government spent $3.98 trillion.ⁱ

Curious to see how this money was spent? We hope so — we've opened the conversation around federal spending and provide the tools to help you navigate the budget from top to bottom.

It is not about the data

it's about the people...

Train the people (and public servants)

Open Data policies

Current focus

Gender, Security and Data: Could civic technology based on open data contribute to mitigate violence against women? If so how?

Open Contracting: How open contracting can foster transparency and accountability benefiting local stakeholders?

Machine learning and Artificial Intelligence

What is our current research focus?

Scaling up and adapting projects in Latin America

Skills: What kind of skills do different groups need to engage with this agenda?

Strategic support How can we better support existing initiatives on the ground that could benefit from our experience?

Thank you!
